Chloe
Hey Yuki! Bad news — the town library is closed all week for renovation. We can't meet there tomorrow arvo for our presentation practice. And the presentation is on Friday, so we really need to practise!

Yuki
Oh no! I was going to borrow some books there too. What about the school study room?

Chloe
It's booked by the debate team until 5. How about my place instead? It's a 10-minute walk from school. Mum says it's fine, and she'll make us afternoon tea.

Yuki
That's very kind. Please say thanks to your mum. Shall I bring anything?

Chloe
Could you bring your laptop? Mine's really slow. We've got a projector, so we can practise with the slides on the wall. Don't forget the charger — the battery never lasts long enough.

Yuki
Sure, I'll bring the charger too. I'll also bring some Japanese sweets for your family. My mum sent me a big box last week.

Chloe
Heaps nice! My little brother will be so happy — he loves anything from Japan. See you at the school gate at 3:30, and we'll walk over together. It's a bit hard to find if you haven't been before.

① The debate team has booked it.
② Chloe's mother does not allow it.
③ It is being renovated.
④ It is too far from school.

問 2 What will Yuki bring? 2

① A laptop and some sweets
② A projector and some sweets
③ A laptop and a projector
④ Only a projector

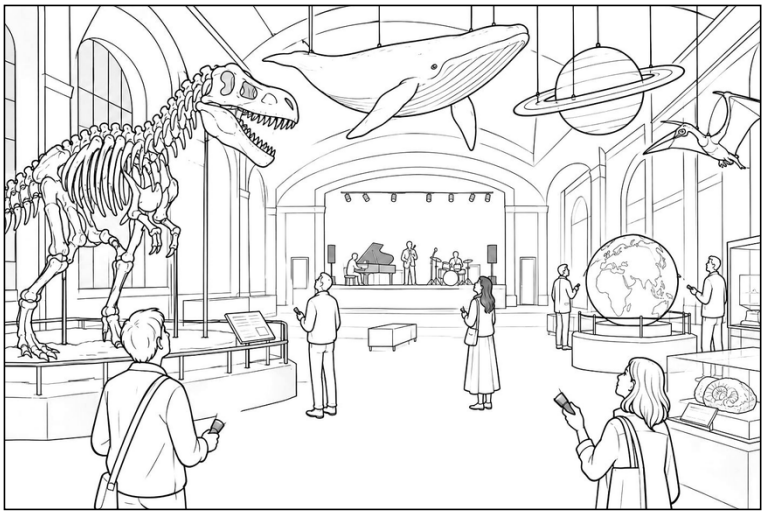

問 3 Where will Yuki and Chloe meet first tomorrow? 3

① At the library
② At Chloe's house
③ In the school study room
④ At the school gate

Museum Lates at the Thornbury Science Museum

On the last Friday of every month, the museum stays open until 10 p.m. for adults only (18+). Enjoy live music, a pop-up bar and special activities among our galleries. Each month has a different theme — this month it is "Night at the Jurassic."

Activity	Time	Booking
Torch-lit tour of the dinosaur hall	7:00 / 8:30 p.m.	Required (£6)
Make-your-own perfume workshop	7:30 p.m.	Required (£12)
Silent disco in the space gallery	All evening	Not required
Talk: "How Do Robots Learn?"	8:00 p.m.	Not required

Tickets for booked activities go on sale on the first day of each month on our website, and they usually sell out quickly. General admission to Museum Lates is free, but bags larger than A3 size must be left in the cloakroom (£2). Please bring photo ID, as staff will check the age of every visitor at the door. Food and drink from the bar may not be taken into the galleries, except for bottled water. The last entry is at 9:00 p.m.

Getting here: The museum is a five-minute walk from Thornbury Central Station. Late-night buses to the city centre leave from the stop outside the main entrance every 20 minutes until 11:30 p.m. There is no car park at the museum, so we recommend public transport.

Visitor reviews

Hannah: The torch-lit tour was the highlight — seeing the T. rex skeleton in the dark was genuinely spooky. Book early; it sold out a week before. Our guide told brilliant stories about how the bones were found.

Marco: Great atmosphere, but the main hall was absolutely heaving by 9 o'clock. I'd arrive at opening time if I went again. The silent disco was great fun, though, and it's free.

Tom: The perfume workshop was fun, but £12 felt a bit expensive for 45 minutes. My friend and I left with two tiny bottles that smell like lemons and pine trees.

Aisha: The robot talk lasted 40 minutes and included a live demonstration. Probably the best free talk I've ever been to. The robot learned to pick up a cup in front of us, after about ten failed attempts!

問 1 Which activity can you join without booking? 4

① The torch-lit tour
② The silent disco
③ The perfume workshop
④ All of the activities

問 2 Which of the following is a fact stated in the reviews? 5

① The tour was the highlight of the evening.
② The atmosphere was great.
③ The robot talk was the best free talk ever.
④ The talk included a live demonstration.

問 3 If you visit with a large backpack, you will need to 6

① pay £2 to leave it in the cloakroom.
② buy a ticket for £6.
③ show it at the entrance with your ID.
④ keep it with you in the galleries.

問 4 Based on the reviews, which advice would be most useful for a first-time visitor? 7

① Go only to the perfume workshop.
② Arrive after 9 p.m. to avoid queues.
③ Book the tour well in advance and arrive early.
④ Bring children to the talk.

The Picture I Didn't Plan

The deadline for the city photo contest was two weeks away, and Ren still had nothing to submit. Every evening, he carried his tripod up to the hill behind the school, hoping to capture a perfect sunset over the harbour. But it was the rainy season. Night after night, the sky stayed grey, and his photos looked flat and lifeless. He had won a small prize the year before with a photo of fireworks, and everyone in the photography club expected something even better from him this time.

One morning, he left home early to try a sunrise instead. Again, clouds covered everything. Disappointed, he was walking past the small bakery on the corner when he saw Mr. Mori, the owner, pulling up the shutters. Mr. Mori was over eighty, and his hands and apron were white with flour. Steam rose from the trays of bread behind him. Without thinking, Ren lifted his camera and pressed the button. The shutter made a small click that sounded very loud in the quiet street.

Mr. Mori turned, surprised, and then laughed. "Taking pictures of an old man? You should photograph something beautiful." Ren apologised and showed him the screen. The old man looked at it for a long time. "My wife used to stand right there every morning," he said quietly. "Fifty-two years." Ren did not know what to say. He thanked Mr. Mori, bought a melon bun he did not really want, and walked to school with the picture still on his screen.

That night, Ren could not stop thinking about Mr. Mori's words. He looked through all his sunset photos again. They were technically good — sharp, well balanced and full of colour — but none of them made him feel anything. The next day, at school, Ren showed his club advisor a dozen sunset shots and, almost as an afterthought, the bakery picture. Ms. Ueda pointed straight at the last one. "This," she said. "The sunsets are pretty, but this one has a story. It's candid — he didn't pose, and you can feel it." Ren was a little disappointed at first. He had spent hours on the hill, and the bakery photo had taken less than a second. But the more he looked at it, the more he understood what she meant.

Ren entered the photo with Mr. Mori's permission. A month later, it won second prize. The judges wrote that the photo "shows the quiet beauty of an ordinary morning." Ren read the comment several times. He printed a large copy and took it to the bakery. It now hangs beside the cash register, and every morning, when Mr. Mori pulls up the shutters, he says good morning to it. Ren still climbs the hill on clear evenings, but now he often stops at the bakery first.

問 1 Why were Ren's sunset photos unsuccessful? 8

① His camera was broken.
② The weather was cloudy during the rainy season.
③ The hill was closed to students.
④ He did not have a tripod.

問 2 Put the following events into the order in which they happened.
9 → 10 → 11 → 12

① Ren took a photo of Mr. Mori.
② The photo was hung in the bakery.
③ Ren tried to photograph sunsets from the hill.

問 3 In the fourth paragraph, the word candid is closest in meaning to 13

① natural and not posed.
② carefully planned.
③ brightly coloured.
④ taken from far away.

Is Learning a Foreign Language Still Worth It?

Some of my friends say there is no need to study foreign languages any more, because translation apps can do the job for us. It is true that these apps have improved a great deal, and I use one myself when I travel. I disagree. I believe learning a language gives us something that no app can. Here are three reasons.

First, translation apps often miss nuance. (a) The Japanese word "otsukaresama," for example, has no single English equivalent. (b) Depending on the situation, it can mean "thank you for your hard work," "good job" or simply "see you." (c) Only a person who understands the culture can choose the right meaning. (d) An app can give us words, but it cannot always give us the feeling behind them.

Second, learning a language changes the way we think. When I studied Spanish, I noticed that it has two verbs for "to be" — one for permanent qualities and one for temporary states. [B] I started to think more carefully about whether a feeling or situation would last. Being tired after a test, for example, is a temporary state, not a part of who I am.

Third, speaking someone's language shows respect. It tells people that we are willing to make an effort to meet them halfway. My favourite food is ramen, especially with lots of garlic. When I said just a few words of Vietnamese to a classmate's grandmother, she smiled and held my hands. She did not speak any English, but at that moment we did not need a translator.

[D] In conclusion, translation apps are popular, but I still study English every day.

先生のコメント

A：第2段落に、アプリの誤訳の具体例を1文加えましょう。

B：前後をつなぐ語句を入れましょう。

C：下線部は主張と関係ありません。差し替えましょう。

D：結論で三つの理由をまとめましょう。

問 1 Based on Comment A, where is the best place to add the following sentence?
"When I typed it into an app, it suggested 'You must be tired,' which sounded strange when I said it to my coach after practice." 14

① (a)　② (b)　③ (c)　④ (d)

問 2 Based on Comment B, which is the best expression to put in [B]? 15

① On the other hand,　② For instance,
③ Even so,　④ Because of this,

問 3 Based on Comment C, which is the best sentence to replace the underlined one? 16

① Vietnamese has six tones.
② Even a simple greeting in someone's first language can make them feel valued.
③ Many apps are free to download.
④ Ramen is popular all over the world.

問 4 Based on Comment D, which is the best way to rewrite the conclusion? 17

① In conclusion, learning a language helps us understand nuance, think in new ways and show respect — things no app can do for us.

② In conclusion, translation apps will soon be perfect.

③ In conclusion, everyone should study Spanish.

④ In conclusion, apps are more useful than teachers.

Volunteer at Meadowfield Music Festival! (25–27 July)

We need 200 volunteers to help our festival run smoothly. All volunteers work three 6-hour shifts over the weekend and get free entry for all three days when they are not working, plus a meal voucher for each shift. Volunteering is a great way to see your favourite bands, meet new people and gain experience that looks good on a CV.

Role	What you do	Minimum age
Welcome Team	Check tickets and give out wristbands at the gates	16
Green Team	Help visitors sort rubbish into recycling bins	16
Kids' Zone	Run games and craft activities for children	18
Info Point	Answer questions; give directions; speak another language (preferred)	17

Apply online by 30 June. Volunteers must attend a one-hour online training session on 15 July. A £30 deposit is taken when you apply and returned after you complete all your shifts. Last year, our volunteers collected more than four tonnes of recycling and helped over 1,500 children make crafts. "It was hard work, but I made friends from all over the country," said one volunteer.

Application (summary)

Name	Mei Tanaka	Age	17
Languages	Japanese, English, some Korean	Camping?	Yes
Role choice 1	Kids' Zone	Role choice 2	Info Point

From: Volunteer Office
To: Mei Tanaka
Subject: Your volunteer role

Dear Mei,

Thank you for applying! Unfortunately, we are unable to place you in your first choice because of the age requirement. However, we are delighted to offer you a place in your second choice — your language skills will be very useful there. Many international visitors come to our festival every year, and last year we had guests from more than twenty countries.

Your shifts are: Friday 12:00–18:00, Saturday 08:00–14:00 and Sunday 14:00–20:00. Please note that the online training has been moved from 15 July to 16 July at 7 p.m.

Volunteers who camp can use the volunteers' campsite, which has hot showers. It is next to the Main Stage, so it can be noisy until midnight — earplugs are recommended! Please collect your volunteer T-shirt and meal vouchers at the Info Point when you arrive on Friday, at least 30 minutes before your first shift. See you there!

Info Point Volunteers — Quick Guide

• The Info Point is in the middle of the festival site, between the Kids' Zone and the recycling area. Look for the big blue "i" sign.

• Most questions are about toilets, lost property, stage times and the last buses into town. A printed timetable and a site map will be at the desk.

• If a child is lost, do not leave the Info Point. Call the security team on the radio and keep the child with you until a team leader arrives.

• Visitors from abroad often come to us first. Wear the badge showing the languages you speak so they can find you easily.

FAQ: Can I swap shifts with a friend? — Yes, but only through the Volunteer Office, at least three days before the festival. What if I am ill on the day? — Call the office as early as possible. If you bring a doctor's note, your deposit will still be returned.

問 1　Which role will Mei have? 18

① Welcome Team　② Green Team　③ Kids' Zone　④ Info Point

問 2　Complete the sentence.

Mei will receive 19 meal vouchers and work 20 hours in total.

① one　② two　③ three

④ 6　⑤ 12　⑥ 18

問 3　When should Mei attend the online training? 21

① 16 July at 7 p.m.　② 15 July at 7 p.m.

③ 25 July at noon　④ 30 June

問 4　Which of the following statements are true? Choose the best combination.

A. Mei will work on Saturday morning.

B. Mei will not get her deposit back.

C. Mei can enjoy the festival on Friday evening.

D. Mei is too young to be a volunteer. 22

① A and B　② A and C　③ B and D　④ C and D

問 5 Which two can be inferred from the materials? (The order does not matter.) 23 24

① Mei will work for 12 hours in total.

② Mei's Korean may be helpful in her role.

③ Volunteers must pay £30 that is never returned.

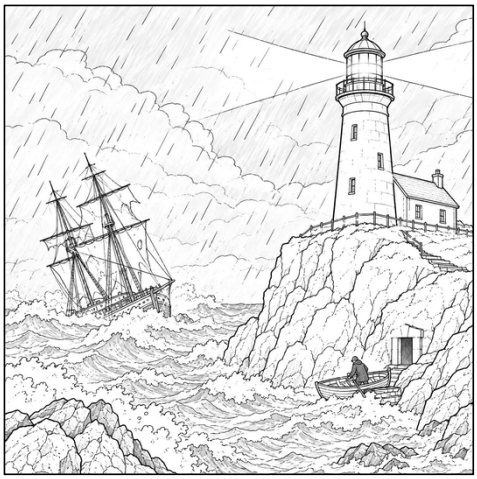

④ The festival lasts for one day.

⑤ Mei will be able to use hot showers at the campsite.

The Keeper of Gull Point

Ada Pell was born in 1841 in the lighthouse at Gull Point, a rocky headland on the coast of Cornwall. Her father was the lighthouse keeper, and from the age of eight, Ada helped him clean the great lamp and record the weather in the logbook every four hours. She learned to read the sea the way other children learned to read books. She went to school in the village only in summer, when the path along the cliffs was safe, but her father taught her arithmetic by asking her to calculate the hours of oil the lamp would need each night.

When her father died suddenly in 1863, the authorities planned to send a new keeper from London. Ada, then 22, wrote a letter asking to take over the job. At first, they refused, saying the work was "unsuitable for a woman." But no replacement could be found before winter, and they reluctantly allowed her to continue "for the time being." An inspector was sent to check her work every three months. His reports, still kept today, describe the lamp as "in excellent order" and the logbook as "the neatest on this coast."

That winter tested her. On the night of 9 November 1864, a violent storm drove a cargo ship, the Margaret Rose, onto the rocks below the lighthouse. Ada kept the lamp burning all night, and at dawn, when the wind dropped slightly, she and a local fisherman rowed out in a small boat and brought back five of the crew. Two more were rescued later that morning by a lifeboat from the nearby town. Sadly, the ship's captain was never found. For the rest of her life, Ada kept a small piece of the Margaret Rose on the windowsill of the lamp room.

Life at the lighthouse was lonely. Supplies came by boat once a fortnight, and in bad weather, Ada sometimes went for six weeks without seeing anyone except the fisherman who had helped with the rescue. She filled the long evenings by reading, mending nets for the village and writing letters to her sister in Plymouth, many of which have survived. In them, she describes the colour of the sea, the birds that rested on the gallery during storms and the exact time of every sunrise.

The rescue made her briefly famous. Newspapers called her "the Heroine of Gull Point," and visitors came to see her. Ada disliked the attention. "I did what any keeper would do," she wrote to her sister. "The real work is not the storm. It is the four-hourly log, every day, for years."

In fact, it was the logbook that became her greatest achievement. Over the next twenty years, Ada compared her weather records with the times of the tides and the reports of local fishermen. She noticed that certain wind directions combined with high spring tides almost always produced dangerous waves near the harbour entrance. In 1885, she produced a simple table that fishermen could use to decide whether it was safe to go out. Local records suggest that the number of fishing boats lost near Gull Point fell sharply in the following decade.

Ada remained keeper until 1901, when she was sixty. The authorities, who had once called the job unsuitable for a woman, presented her with a silver medal for "long and faithful service." At the ceremony, she thanked the fishermen of the village rather than the officials. Her logbooks, covering almost forty years, are now kept in the county archive, where scientists still use them to study changes in the local climate. Ada spent her last years in a cottage in the village, where fishermen often came to ask her opinion before going out to sea. The lighthouse was made automatic in 1953 and no longer has a keeper. Today, visitors can climb its 112 steps in summer. On the wall of the lamp room hangs a copy of Ada's 1885 table, and beside it a short line from one of her letters: "Watch, write it down, and the sea will tell you its secrets."

発表メモ

Ada Pell (1841–?)

■ Why she was able to become keeper → 問1

■ Events in order → 問2 (four boxes)

■ Her greatest achievement and its effects → 問3 (two answers)

■ Her attitude to fame → 問4

問 1　Why was Ada allowed to continue as keeper after her father died? 25

① The authorities believed women were the best keepers.

② She had rescued a ship's crew.

③ No replacement could be found before winter.

④ Her father had asked the authorities in a letter.

問 2　Put the following events into the order in which they happened.

26 → 27 → 28 → 29

① Ada created a table to help fishermen.

② Ada asked to take over her father's job.

③ Ada received a silver medal.

④ Ada helped rescue sailors from a cargo ship.

問 3　Choose two statements about Ada's logbook work that are true. (The order does not matter.) 30 31

① She combined weather records with tide times and fishermen's reports.

② She stopped recording the weather after the rescue.

③ Her table made the storms less frequent.

④ Fewer fishing boats appear to have been lost after her table was used.

⑤ Her logbooks were destroyed in 1901.

問 4 Which best describes Ada's attitude towards her fame? 32

① She enjoyed meeting the visitors.

② She thought daily, careful work mattered more than one heroic night.

③ She used it to become a writer.

④ She believed she deserved more recognition.

Tiny Pieces, Big Problem

Plastic is cheap, light and strong, which is why we use so much of it — more than 400 million tonnes are produced around the world every year. But these same qualities mean it does not easily disappear. Microplastics are pieces of plastic smaller than five millimetres — about the size of a sesame seed or smaller. They have been found almost everywhere scientists have looked: in deep ocean trenches, in Arctic snow, in tap water and even in human blood. Some estimates suggest that the average person may swallow tens of thousands of tiny plastic particles every year through food, water and the air.

Scientists divide microplastics into two types. Primary microplastics are made small on purpose. Examples include the tiny beads once common in face scrubs and toothpaste, many of which are now banned in several countries. Secondary microplastics, which make up the majority, come from larger objects that break down over time. A plastic bottle left on a beach is slowly broken into smaller and smaller pieces by sunlight and waves.

The story of microbeads shows that action is possible. In the early 2010s, scientists began reporting large numbers of tiny plastic beads in lakes and rivers. Within a few years, public campaigns led the United States, the United Kingdom, Canada and other countries to ban them in rinse-off cosmetics. Companies replaced them with natural materials such as ground nut shells or salt. However, microbeads were only a small part of the problem, and banning secondary microplastics is far more difficult, because they come from so many everyday products.

One surprising source is our clothes. Many fabrics, such as polyester and nylon, are made from plastic. Each time they are washed, thousands of tiny fibres come loose and flow into wastewater. Treatment plants catch many of them, but not all. Car tyres are another major source: as they wear down on roads, they release particles that are washed into rivers by rain. Even paint on buildings and ships, and the artificial grass used on some sports fields, can release tiny plastic pieces as they wear away.

What harm do microplastics cause? In the sea, animals such as fish, shellfish and seabirds often mistake them for food. This can make the animals feel full without receiving any nutrition, and some studies have linked it to slower growth. Because small animals are eaten by larger ones, microplastics can move up the food chain. The effects on human health, however, are still unclear. Researchers have found microplastics in the human body, but they do not yet know whether — or how much — they are harmful. Studying this is difficult, because there is no group of people who have never been exposed to microplastics to compare with.

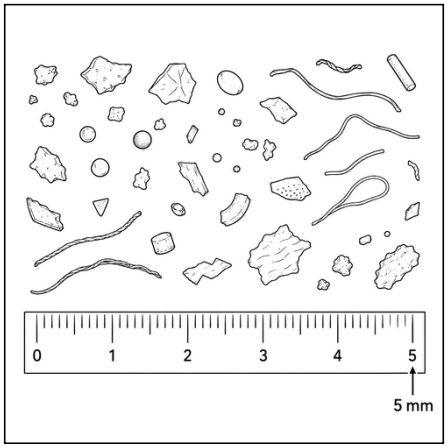

Microplastics can also carry other problems with them. Their surfaces easily attract harmful chemicals from the surrounding water, so a single particle may contain much higher levels of pollution than the water around it. Bacteria can grow on them too, and floating plastic may carry these organisms to places they would never normally reach. Scientists are still studying how serious these risks are.

Solutions exist at several levels. Governments can ban unnecessary plastic products and require better filters at treatment plants. Manufacturers can design fabrics that shed fewer fibres. Individuals can help too: washing synthetic clothes less often, using a special laundry bag that traps fibres, choosing natural materials such as cotton or wool when possible, and reducing single-use plastics. In France, a law now requires all new washing machines to be fitted with a microfibre filter, and several other countries are considering similar rules. Some clothing companies have started testing fabrics that lose up to 80 percent fewer fibres in the wash.

Because microplastics are so small and so widespread, removing them from the environment is nearly impossible. The most effective strategy, experts agree, is to stop them from entering it in the first place. Every plastic item that is reused, recycled or never bought is one less source of the tiny pieces that may stay in our oceans and soils for hundreds of years.

Microplastics

- Definition: plastic pieces smaller than 5 mm
- Two types: (問1)
- Sources: face scrubs, bottles, (問2)
- Effects: animals → certain / humans → (問3)
- Best strategy: (問4)

問 1 Which best completes "Two types" on the slide? 33

① natural and artificial
② large and small
③ old and new
④ made small on purpose, and broken down from larger items

問 2 Which two sources should be added to the slide? (The order does not matter.) 34 35

① cotton shirts
② fibres from washing synthetic clothes
③ car tyres wearing down on roads
④ wool sweaters
⑤ Arctic snow

問 3 Which best completes "humans →" on the slide? 36

① still unknown
② proven to be very harmful
③ proven to be completely safe
④ only affects children

問 4 Which best completes "Best strategy" on the slide? 37

① Remove microplastics from the ocean with nets
② Stop eating fish and shellfish
③ Prevent microplastics from entering the environment
④ Wash clothes more often

問 5 Your classmate Ken says: "I wash my polyester sports shirts every day and buy a bottle of water from a vending machine after practice." Based on the article, which is the best advice for Ken? 38

① Switch to washing his shirts at a higher temperature.
② Use a laundry bag that traps fibres and carry a reusable water bottle.
③ Leave his used bottles on the beach so they break down.
④ Buy more polyester shirts so he can wash them less.

あなたは「高校の始業時刻を遅らせるべきか」というテーマでエッセイを書くために、次の資料を集めました。

Source A — Research summary

Most adults have noticed that teenagers find it hard to get up in the morning. For a long time, this was blamed on bad habits. Research over the past thirty years, however, tells a different story. During adolescence, the body's internal clock shifts later. Teenagers typically start to feel sleepy around 11 p.m. and are biologically ready to wake at about 8 a.m. This is not laziness; it is a natural change. Medical associations in several countries recommend that secondary schools start no earlier than 8:30 a.m. Sleep loss in teenagers has been linked to poorer concentration, lower test scores, more car accidents among young drivers and a higher risk of low mood. One review found that students who slept less than seven hours a night were more likely to feel sleepy in class and to say that they found it hard to control their emotions. Not every school that changed its start time saw the same results, however. In schools where students simply stayed up later, the benefits were smaller. Researchers say a later start works best when it is combined with advice for students and families about healthy sleep habits, such as keeping screens out of the bedroom.

Results at Westbrook High (start time moved from 8:00 to 8:50 in Year 2)

Source B — Opinions

Yuto (student): I take a 70-minute train to school. With an 8:00 start, I leave home at 6:30 and fall asleep in first period. A later start would change my life. On weekends I wake up naturally at about 8:30 and feel great.

Mrs. Clarke (parent): I start work at 8:30. If school starts later, I can't drive my daughter there. Schools need to think about families like mine. I am not against the idea, but there must be somewhere safe for children to wait.

Mr. Ito (football coach): If classes finish later, practice will end after dark in winter. We would need to rethink club schedules.

Hana (student): I like the early start because school finishes early and I have time for my part-time job. I go to bed at 10, so I'm not tired. I don't think one rule fits everyone.

Dr. Patel (school doctor): Many of the students I see in the morning have headaches or feel dizzy, and when I ask, they have usually slept five or six hours. A later start is not a magic cure, but it gives their bodies a fairer chance.

Ms. Reyes (principal): At Westbrook, we solved the transport problem by opening the library at 7:30 for early arrivals, and we moved some club activities to the morning. Teachers were worried about finishing later, but most now say that students are more awake in the first lesson.

Source C — Local newspaper: "Two Years On, Westbrook Says Later Is Better"

When Westbrook High moved its start time from 8:00 to 8:50, not everyone was convinced. Some parents signed a letter asking the school to think again, and local bus companies had to change their timetables. Two years later, the mood has changed. "The first lesson used to be the worst of the day," says maths teacher Lucy Brown. "Now students actually answer questions at nine o'clock." Attendance in the first lesson has risen, and the school says the number of students arriving late has fallen by half.

The school has also noticed fewer visits to the nurse's room in the morning. However, the change has not solved every problem. Students who work in the evening say they are still short of sleep, and the school admits that a few families continue to find the new schedule difficult. Westbrook now holds a meeting every spring at which parents and students can share their views on the timetable.

解説

第1問 テキストメッセージ（情報の読み取り）

本文の要旨
オーストラリア留学中の Yuki と、クラスメイトの Chloe のやりとり。グループ発表の準備で図書館に集まる予定だったが、図書館が改装で閉館。Chloe の家に変更し、Yuki はノートパソコン、Chloe はプロジェクターを用意する。

問 1 解答番号 1 正解 ③ （2点）
”closed all week for renovation”が根拠。① はスクールの自習室の話。

問 2 解答番号 2 正解 ① （2点）
Chloe が頼んだノートパソコン＋ Yuki が自分から言ったお菓子。プロジェクターは Chloe の家にある。

問 3 解答番号 3 正解 ④ （2点）
”See you at the school gate at 3:30, and we’ll walk over together.” → まず校門で待ち合わせ。② は最終的な練習場所。

語句 renovation 改装 ／ arvo（豪口語）午後 = afternoon ／ heaps（豪口語）たくさん ／ projector プロジェクター

第2問 イベント案内とレビュー（事実と意見）

本文の要旨
イギリスの博物館の夜間イベント「Museum Lates」の案内（金曜夜・18歳以上・ガイドツアー・ワークショップ）と参加者のレビュー。

問 1 解答番号 4 正解 ② （3点）
表で ”Not required”はサイレントディスコとロボットの講演。選択肢にあるのは ②。

問 2 解答番号 5 正解 ④ （3点）
Aisha ”included a live demonstration”は確認できる事実。①②③ は評価（意見）。

問 3 解答番号 6 正解 ① （3点）
A3より大きいかばんはクロークに預ける（£2）。

問 4 解答番号 7 正解 ③ （3点）
Hannah「1週間前に売り切れた・早めに予約」＋ Marco「9時には混む・開場時に来る」→ ③。② は逆、④ 18歳以上限定。

語句 late（英）夜間開館 ／ admission 入場 ／ workshop 体験講座 ／ heaving（英口語）とても混んでいる

第3問 物語（出来事の順序・語句の意味）

本文の要旨
高校の写真部員 Ren は、コンテストに出す作品に悩む。派手な夕焼けの写真が撮れずにいたが、毎朝店を開ける近所のパン屋の老人を撮った一枚が、顧問に「物語がある」と言われ、入賞する。

問 1 解答番号 8 正解 ② （3点）
”it was the rainy season. Night after night, the sky stayed grey” → ②。

問 2 解答番号 9・10・11・12 正解 ③→①→④→② （3点・完答）

丘で夕焼け（第1段落）→ パン屋を撮る（第2段落）→ 顧問が選ぶ（第4段落）→ 店に飾られる（第5段落）。⑤ は逆：Ren が思わず撮り、老人は「美しいものを撮りなさい」と笑った。

問 3 解答番号 13 正解 ① （3点）

語句 lighthouse keeper 灯台守 ／ logbook 業務日誌 ／ tide 潮 ／ shipwreck 難破 ／ rowing boat（英）手こぎボート

第7問 論理的な文章＋スライド（要点・応用）

本文の要旨
「マイクロプラスチック」についての説明文。発生源（一次＝洗顔料のビーズ等、二次＝ペットボトルや衣類の繊維が砕けたもの）、海の生物や人体への影響の研究状況、洗濯ネット・フィルター・使い捨て削減などの対策。

問 1 解答番号 33 正解 ④　(3点)

一次（意図的に小さく作られた）と二次（大きなものが砕けた）→ ④。

問 2 解答番号 34・35 正解 ②・③（順不同）　(4点・順不同・完答)

② 合成繊維の洗濯で出る繊維。③ タイヤの摩耗。①④ は天然素材（対策として勧められている）。⑤ 見つかった場所で発生源ではない。

問 3 解答番号 36 正解 ①　(3点)

"The effects on human health, however, are still unclear." → ①。②③ はどちらも言い過ぎ。

問 4 解答番号 37 正解 ③　(3点)

最終段落 "stop them from entering it in the first place" → ③。① ほぼ不可能とされる。④ 逆（洗う回数を減らす）。

問 5 解答番号 38 正解 ② （3点）

合成繊維の洗濯 → 繊維をとらえるネット、使い捨てボトル → 繰り返し使える水筒。② が両方に対応。③ は二次マイクロプラスチックを増やす。

語句 microplastic マイクロプラスチック ／ synthetic 合成の ／ fibre（英）繊維 ／ food chain 食物連鎖 ／ filter ろ過装置

第8問 複数の意見＋論説文の構成（統合・要約）

本文の要旨

テーマ「高校は始業時刻を遅らせるべきか」。研究記事（思春期の体内時計は夜型にずれる）、実施した学校のデータ、生徒・保護者・部活顧問・校長の意見。
生徒のエッセイの構成メモを完成させる。

問 1 解答番号 39 正解 ① （3点）

研究とデータは遅らせる利点を示し、反対意見（保護者・顧問）にも解決策がある → ①。③ は Source A が否定。

問 2 解答番号 40 正解 ③ （3点）

”the body’s internal clock shifts later … it is a natural change” → ③。①②④ は本文にない。

問 3 解答番号 41 正解 ④ （3点）

睡眠 6.6 → 7.3 → 7.4 時間に増加、遅刻 12 → 7 → 6 件に減少 → ④。

問 4 解答番号 42・43 正解 ②・④（順不同） （4点・順不同・完答）

② Mrs. Clarke（出勤前に送れない）。④ Mr. Ito（冬は暗くなってから練習が終わる）。①③⑤ は誰も言っていない。

問 5 解答番号 44 正解 ② （4点）

研究の推奨（8:30以降）＋ Westbrook の解決策（図書館の早朝開放・朝の部活）で二つの懸念に対応する ②。④ は極端。

語句 adolescent 思春期の ／ circadian rhythm 体内時計 ／ tardiness 遅刻 ／ extracurricular 課外の ／ trial 試行
